

Please do not allow cellular telephone use aboard airborne aircraft. As a frequent air traveler, the loud conversations during boarding before the aircraft door is shut, and upon landing, are bad enough as it is. Many people use the time on an aircraft to relax or work, including myself, and involuntarily participating in several cellular conversations held by seatmates while in the air is most unappealing. Unlike a train, there is no ability to have designated "quiet" cars as Amtrak has done.
